(a) whether the Supreme Court had sought a report from Govemment few years back on implementation of Article 44 of the Constitution; and

(b) if so, the details thereof and action taken by the Govemment in this regard?

THE MINISTER OF LAW, JUSTICE AND COMPANY AFFAIRS (SHRI ARUN JAITLEY): (a) Yes, Sir. The Hon'ble Supreme Court in Smt. Sarla Mudgal Vs. Union of India on 10th May, 1995 directed the Govemment of India to file an affidavit indicating the steps taken towards securing a "uniform civil code" for the citizens of India.

(b) An affidavit in pursuance of the directions of the Hon'ble Supreme †Original notice of the question was received in Hindi.

Court was filed on 5th December, 1996, indicating that it would be difficult to bring in a uniform legislation applicable to all religious denominations unless there is a social acceptability to the same. It was further indicated in the said affidavit that it would be advisable and practicable to progressively move in that direction securing uniformity slowly and steadily in consonance with the social acceptability for a uniform civil code. The question of implementing directive principles for evolving a uniform civil code also necessarily involves changes in personal laws of various communities. The policy of the Govemment is normally not to effect any change in the personal laws unless the initiative therefor comes from the community concerned. However, reforms in the personal laws have been undertaken from time to time on initiative of the concerned community. The Govemment has recently taken steps in this direction by enacting and enforcing the Indian Divorce (Amendment) Act, 2001, and by introducing the Indian Succession (Amendment) Bill, 2001.
